

Errata: An automated strategy for calculation of phase diagram sections ...

Usually I have to take credit for the errors in my papers, however in this case two errors were introduced during copy-editing and were not corrected even though they were marked in the galleys.

p 699, column 2, line 13: The text “Then our strategy is presented in detail and concludes ...” should read “We then present our strategy in detail and conclude ...”

p 706, discussion, line 18: The text “the approach has the advantage that ...” should read “our approach has the advantage...”

p 707, appendix, 3rd sentence, should read: Both kinds of variables are intensive and to distinguish them they are designated compositional (Connolly, 1990) and potential variables (Hillert, 1985;Palatnik & Landau, 1964), respectively.